SPECIAL EVENTS

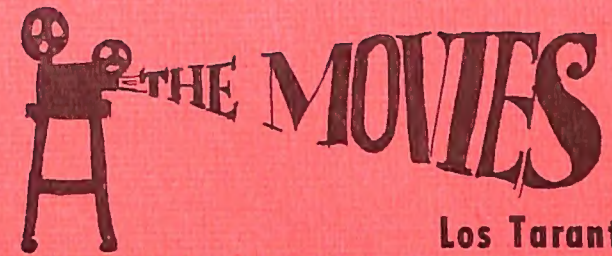

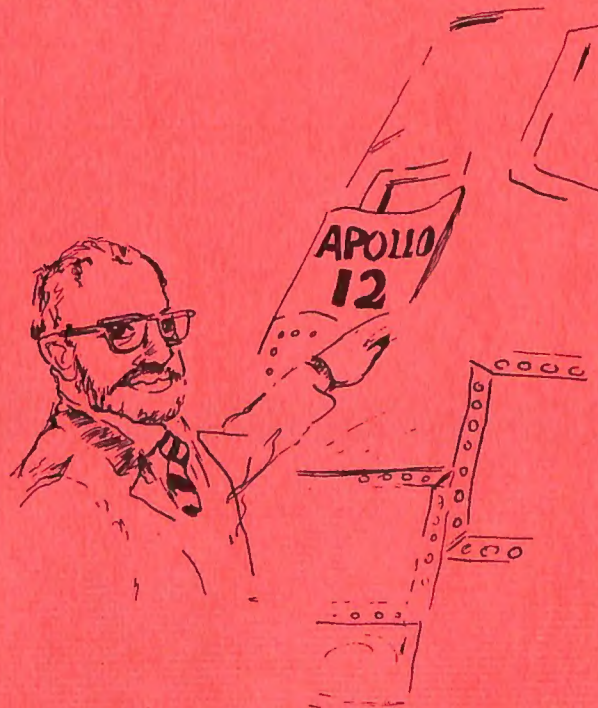

Russ Burgess . . .

. . . will give a lecture-demonstration in the College Auditorium at 8:00 p.m. on January 15, 1973. A psychic who is a skeptic, he gives the audience an unorthodox look at ESP. Here one can obtain a realistic insight of Extra Sensory Perception with all the misconceptions and false teachings removed. With the topic "ESP in Action" Mr. Burgess does an informative entertaining demonstration of the power of ESP. He thrilled the audience with a visit to our campus three years ago and we are again looking forward to a large crowd who will be delighted. Admission will be 50¢.

Stanton Friedman . . .

. . . will speak in the College Auditorium, Wednesday, February 14, 1973, at 8:00 p.m. A nuclear physicist in the spacecraft industry and student of unidentified flying objects (UFOs) speaks on the topic "Flying Saucers are Real." Mr. Friedman, who says he is the only space age scientist devoting full time to "ufology," is convinced, after 13 years of study, that the "earth is being visited by intelligently controlled extraterrestrial vehicles." Whether you are a believer or a doubter, this promises to be interesting. Admission will be 50¢.

Los Tarantos

"Los Tarantos," a Spanish gypsy version of Romeo and Juliet, was filmed in color in the streets of Barcelona, and revolves around the lives and passions of two rival gypsy families who live there.

Violent quarrels break out between the Tarantos, who live in the hilltop slums and the Zorongos, rich horse traders. The son of one family meets the daughter of the other at a wedding, and they fall in love. While the two swear eternal love, the young woman's father forbids their marriage and promises her to Curro, and unscrupulous thug.

On Christmas eve, as the two lovers resolve to flee to a better place, the story takes a turn and its plot loosely follows that of Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet."

Jan. 12, 8:00 p.m., Campus Center

Two Rode Together

This John Ford western portrays a not uncommon problem faced by the early settlers of the American Southwest--what to do with friend and relatives who, kidnapped by Indians in youth, are returned home years later. Savages, they were forced to live with, and savages they became. Stewart and Wildmark go into Comanche Territory to free the people, only to find on their return that one of the young boys they rescue has lived among the Indians so long, he believes himself to be one and murders the woman claiming to be his real mother. The girl, forced to be the wife of the Chief is shunned by the settlers. A valiant story of a violent hour in American History.

Jan. 26, 8:00 p.m., Campus Center

It's Peter Sellers in a clerical collar and granny glasses in an uproariously comic caper that pokes acid fun at Humanity and the Church Establishment.

Sellers is the Reverend John Smallwood, the new vicar of Obiston Parva. Nothing terribly out of the ordinary here, with one small exception - Sellers actually believes the tenets of the faith he preaches and sets about methodically, to implement them! He does battle with racial inequality in his parish by making an affable East Indian black, Church Warden. He shares his earthly possessions with the poor by taking a grimy family of squatters under his roof. He afflicts the comfortable by getting them to give away their wares instead of selling them. He comforts the afflicted by distributing free food. Everything is fine until the Establishment rots his theoretical timbers, and the ideal life structure he has created comes crashing down in a sea of laughs for the audience.
